Volunteering opportunities include practical horticultural work, food growing and related activities, and working with children. Opportunities are flexible and we try to accommodate volunteers' specific needs. Support is available on a one-to-one basis from a dedicated staff member, and programmes of work will be regularly reviewed in order to ensure that your volunteering experience is a positive one. Volunteer expenses can be paid. Relevant training opportunities often arise.

Grow Organic

School and community group food growing

Our experienced team offers taster and longer term sessions/workshops around food growing, healthy eating and related activities. This enables participants to get fitter while gaining practical experience of growing food, and then they can eat healthy, fresh, organic produce as well! With allotments around the district, work can take place either on BCEP's sites, schools or community settings.

FLINT (Food Links Network) Community food co-ops

The FLINT programme makes fresh fruit & vegetables affordable and available to local neighbourhoods. The team provides advice, equipment, training and a bulk-purchasing scheme to community food groups, both new and old. The network also promotes healthy eating through a range of fun activities including cook-and-eat sessions.
